

If you decide to opt out, you should be aware that no access will be allowed to your financial aid award information on your RISD account. No electronic correspondence or email communication will be permitted with the Financial Aid office.

Granting e-Consent allows students to have full access to their RISD financial aid account including the ability to:

- Review, accept, adjust and/or decline your financial aid online
- Receive electronic notification of loan disbursements- includes the amount, date of disbursement, and right to cancel loans
- Reminder notices, including specific communication about your financial aid file
- Notice of scholarship opportunities which include eligibility requirements and how to apply
- Notice of loan requirements, including entrance counseling, Master Promissory Note (MPN) and exit counseling

If you decide opt out of electronic communication, you should be aware that no access will be allowed to your financial aid award information on your RISD account. No electronic correspondence or email communication will be permitted with the Financial Aid office.

- All communication will be sent to your current mailing or permanent address that you have on file with RISD. This may delay processing due to mail time.
- No email exchanges will be permitted and all request for information must be made in writing.
- Phone communication will be allowed if staff is able to verify the identity of the individual calling.

A student may change their decision on e-Consent at any time by contacting the Financial Aid office at sfs@risd.edu.
